

MLA DOCUMENTATION

9th edition, 2021

When writing a research paper, if you use the exact words or original ideas of another person, you need to document, or give credit to, the sources of these words or ideas.

If you use the words from the original source verbatim, then quotation marks are necessary. If you paraphrase, or restate, the idea in your own words, quotation marks are not required, but documentation of the source is still required.

In the Modern Language Association (MLA) format, you briefly identify your sources in the text of your paper, then provide the full information in the Works Cited list at the end of the paper.

First we will briefly explain how to document quotations and paraphrasing, followed by how to create the Works Cited list.

PARENTHETICAL DOCUMENTATION (IN-TEXT)

When writing your paper in the MLA format, parenthetical documentation is used to briefly identify the sources of information you have borrowed from. Parenthetical documentation should be integrated smoothly into the text of your paper, rather than listed separately.

The general rule is to briefly cite the source directly in the text of your paper. If the reader wants more information, they can consult the Works Cited list at the end of your paper.

If the author's name is mentioned in your writing (this is called a “signal phrase”), you only need to put the page number in parentheses at the end of the sentence. The reader can then consult the Works Cited list at the end of the paper to get the complete citation.

Note: Some sources, especially those on the Web, do not give page numbers. The general rule is to give a section number if it is given, which is rare; otherwise, just use the author's name. If no author is given, use the first words of the title.

As Ta-Nehisi Coates explains, “At Howard University, one of the greatest collections of books could be found in the Moorland-Spangarn Research Center. Moorland held archives, papers, collections, and virtually any book ever written by or about black people” (47).

According to Jamaica Kincaid in The Autobiography of My Mother, there is an alienation from an island culture that has been completely dominated by the imperialistic power of England (7).

You may decide not to mention the source of your information in the text of your paper. In these instances, enclose both the author's last name and page referred to in parentheses at the end of the sentence. The reader can then consult the Works Cited list at the end of the paper to get the complete citation.

According to one study of climate change, the “speed of warming is more than ten times that at the end of an ice age, the fastest known natural sustained change on a global scale” (National Academy 9).

In an article on the benefits of video games and flow state, it is argued that when players work together collaboratively, they can improve their results in the game, while also completing all required learning outcomes (Vras 117-118).

For publications with no author given, you should include the first one to two keywords from the title and the page number in parentheses.

“The stabilization of relations among Comanches, immigrant tribes, and Osages also made possible a restoration of direct commercial ties between eastern Comanches and Americans” (“The Comanche Trail” 60).

DO I HAVE TO DOCUMENT EVERYTHING?

One of the hardest parts of documentation is to decide how far to go in documenting your sources. If you mention that the World Trade Center was attacked on September 11, 2001, do you have to show where that information came from? No. This is considered common knowledge, even if you didn’t know on your own.

This can get tricky. When in doubt, it is probably a good idea to include the documentation. Ask a faculty librarian or your instructor for advice on specific situations. We are here to assist you!

WORKS CITED PAGE

The Works Cited page has all of the sources that contributed ideas and information to your paper. It is the same as a bibliography. This list is arranged in alphabetical order by whatever the first word is, usually the authors’ last names. If a source doesn’t list an author, alphabetize by the first word of the title (ignore “A,” “An,” and “The”).

If multiple authors' last names start with the same letter, then alphabetize by the second letter in their name. If the second letter is the same, then move on to the third and so on. See the example Works Cited page below.

The general rules for Works Cited entries are:

PRINT BOOKS

Last name, First name of author. Title of book. Name of publisher, Year published.

Davis, Angela Y. Blues Legacies and Black Feminism: Gertrude “Ma” Rainey, Bessie Smith, and Billie Holiday. Pantheon, 1998.

MAGAZINE ARTICLES

Last name, First name of author (if given). “Title of Article.” Name of magazine, Date of issue, Page numbers.

Deresiewicz, William. “The Death of the Artist - and the Birth of the Creative Entrepreneur.” The Atlantic, Jan.-Feb. 2015, pp.92-97.

SCHOLARLY JOURNALS FROM LIBRARY ONLINE DATABASE

Last name, First name of author. “Title of Article.” Name of periodical, Volume, Number, Year, Page numbers.

Boggs, Colleen Glenney. “Public Reading and the Civil War Draft Lottery.” American Periodicals, vol. 26, no. 2, 2016, pp. 149-66.

URL.

WEB PAGES

Last name, First name of author (or name of creator organization). “Title of the Article or Individual Page.” Title of the Website, Name of the Publisher, date of publication, URL.

OTHER RULES

When required information is not given -- In the spot where the information should be, put the following abbreviations:
 No date of publication: n.d. No place of publication or no publisher: n.p. No page number: n.pag.

A second work by the same author--Instead of repeating the author's name in the Works Cited list, for the second entry put three hyphens and a period (---.) and alphabetize as if the name were spelled out.

There are many variations. Please see the following examples for print, video, and online sources:

IN-TEXT CITATION SAMPLE PARAGRAPH

Saturn is the sixth planet from the sun. It is 9.45 times wider than the Earth and is 95 times more massive in its overall size. Saturn takes 29.46 Earth years to complete one orbit around the sun. The planet is composed mainly of hydrogen and helium (the most abundant elements in the universe) and is circled by hundreds of rings consisting of small, ice-covered particles (Beech 3836). “It is assumed that Saturn is a solid under the action of gravity of the Sun and Jupiter” (Krasilnikov and Amelin 127).
